

Summer Scholars Research Program FAQs

Housing

1. Does the Summer Scholars Research Program provide housing?

The Summer Scholars Research Program does not provide housing for students. Out-of-state students or students who live too far to commute to Emory (more than 2 hours away) may arrange housing through Emory Conference Service's Summer Intern Housing Program (SIHP). SIHP provides housing options for minors working on campus. Please reach out to ECS at sihp@emory.edu to request housing and let them know that you are requesting housing as a participant of the Summer Scholars Research Program. It is best to begin your application for housing as soon as you are accepted to the program, availability is scarce by the end of spring.

Please note that ECS housing is not associated with the Summer Scholars Research Program.

You can get more information on housing at www.emory.edu/sihp. See the rates here and FAQs here.

Phone number for the SIHP manager: 404-727-7632

2. What are the requirements for staying on campus?

The only students allowed to stay on campus are out-of-state students or students that would need to travel extensively to participate in the program (2 hours).

3. Who stays with students that are housed on campus?

The Summer Scholars Research Program provides no formal oversight of students who are housed on campus outside of business hours (8 A.M. – 5 P.M.). The SIHP office provides 24-hour maintenance and on-call staff to respond to guest's housing-related concerns. If there is an emergency, students should call the SIHP office (404-727-7632) or on-call pager for after-hours assistance (in your welcome packet).

4. What should I do if I would like to room with another SSRP student?

Send the program coordinator an e-mail at ssrp@emory.edu requesting to be put in contact with other students interested in staying on campus.

5. Does SSRP have after-hours activities for students staying on campus?

The program does not offer any after-hours activities for students. Students and mentors will be notified in advance if a fieldtrip will be outside of regular business hours.
